Description

This enchanting early 20th-century oil painting by Danish artist Herman Jensen (1893-1941) depicts a seated woman playing the banjo before a window. Scenes with musicians are most fascinating as they conjure up inaudible sounds. Can you imagine the lively vibrations of song echoing around this quaint interior? It's a gentle and sensitive piece - with the figure almost silhouetted against the brightness of the view beyond. Perhaps it's the artist's own home. In 1914 Jensen married Olga Helene Andersson and she would've been around 26 when he produced this. Signed and framed. Medium: Oil on canvas Overall size: 33" x 41½" / 84cm x 106cm Year of creation: c. 1920 Condition: Artwork presents well. Craquelure but the paint is stable. Frame with some light wear. Danish artist Herman Jensen is predominantly known as a painter of spirited landscapes, figures and quiet interior scenes. He trained in Paris and is considered to be an important member of the 'Bonholm School' of artists. His works, particularly his plein-air views, often blend the confident rhythm of French expressionism with the cool mood of his homeland. He's represented at the Met, New York, with 'the Violinis...
