Description

We are delighted to offer this splendid antique Victorian 18ct gold turquoise, pearl and diamond ring made c.1880. The ring features such a lovely and delightful design with a standout colour combination of blue and white, contrasted with sparkling diamonds. At a distance, its unique Victorian and vivid two-toned colour design is distinctly and eye-catching, yet upon closer inspection, its fine craftsmanship, goldsmithing and getting become evermore apparent. Three central pearls are flanked by two diamonds mounted in 18ct gold and a 'floating' illusion is created by the space between the central line and the surrounding bezel of further diamonds and turquoise. Its opulent and 'no cost cut' embellishment is further apparent with each 'shoulder' of the ring being intricately set with two further diamonds of tapering sizes. Such elegant, ebullient and distinguished design would most certainly complement wearing among other antique pieces or as a standalone ring, accenting your style and serving as a conversation starter for the keen-eyed. Turquoise is known to be the birthstone of December, Diamond for April and Pearl for June. A very special gift to ...
