Description

We are delighted to offer this Irish Georgian solid silver bowl with the marks of Robert W Smith, Dublin, 1832. This bowl presents an array of exemplary and absolutely delightful features, distinctly Irish and profusely chased with floral, foliate and scrolled motifs. Comparative to English silver of the same period, Irish chased silver features a slightly different style with a deeper and more contrasted relief. This can be very attractive and desirable for ornate interior settings and is an element of additional collectability. Owing to its age and the manner in which Irish chased silver was decorated, this bowl presents a lovely patina and colour contrast between the recessed stippling and the embossed relief areas. The depth and 'crispness' of Irish chasing remain particularly well in this example with ornate decorations throughout that is tactile to the touch. The decorative and ornamentations on this bowl is spectacular with no corners cut. No space has been wasted without consideration for intricate embellishments; the top flared section features an exceptional sea-spume/coral-like decoration, followed by the band of chased decorations with two crests...
