Description

Edward Henry Eugene Fletcher 1851-1945, John Hayes was a pseudonym of Edward Fletcher. Fletcher was Born in Hammersmith he was the son of a Bengal river pilot, and having spent some time in India the family returned to England whilst he was still a boy. He was educated at Christ's Hospital and the Chelsea School of Art where he became a close friend of Daniel Sherrin, the landscape artist. After his marriage, Fletcher lived in Blackheath and owned a small auction house. At about forty he gave up the business to become a professional painter, having previously painted as a hobby. He also painted under the pseudonym John Hayes, and himself is often mistakenly called Edwin Fletcher. He specialised in painting busy shipping scenes on the River Thames in a style not dissimilar to William Wyllie and made good use of impasto. Many of his pictures are understood to have been sold in North America.

'Pool of London' signed John Hayes on relined canvas, image size 49.5x74.5 cms, framed size 79x104.5...
