Description

These unusual three-part oak dressers are so full of character and history. This early example has a particularly appealing colour and patina with a wide range of shades from honey to dark oak. The top section has a moulded frieze and is standing on baluster turned supports. The decorative mid section has a particularly interesting carved frieze and central panel with two cupboard doors either side and two further baluster supports. The lower section has two three-panelled doors with scratch moulded rails and styles. A very characterful and attractive late seventeenth century piece. C1690
