Description

This early 20th-century oil painting depicts a river landscape with a rustic cottage and rowboat. Nestled amid autumnal foliage, a stone cottage stands alongside a sinuous tree. It's buried in nature, as it has been for decades. A boatman, perhaps its owner, readies himself to head downriver. The shimmering water peppered with algae. The work bears an indecipherable signature, which is a shame as it's by an accomplished hand. In many ways, it's similar to landscapes by French artist Eugene Galien-Laloue (1854-1941) who worked under several pseudonyms. Held in a decorative scroll and foliate frame. Medium: Oil on canvas Overall size: 17½" x 14" / 45cm x 35cm Year of creation: c. 1930 Condition: Artwork presents well. Fine craquelure but the paint is stable. Frame with some light wear.
