Description

Victorian walnut credenza display cabinet This superb quality Victorian walnut credenza display cabinet was made circa 1870. Credenzas' usually have blind panel doors to the centre and the bow glass doors to each end, this fine example has all 4 doors glazed allowing for complete display of your special collection. The interior is lined in an ivory fabric that allows your collection to stand out. The shelves in the interior have fine line box stringing and provide a large display surface. The top has grade 1 burr walnut and is banded by purple heart, that give a wonderful contrast to the walnut and the inlaid panels along the frieze. The inlaid panels consist of a chain of squares interlocked with amboyna inside as well as purple heart, the panels are bordered by a combination of boxwood and ebony. It is a rare stunning and interesting design where the cabinetmaker moved away from the usual floral patterns that were the norm in this period. Not only do you have the marvellous inlay you also have the gilt brass mounts to the front and side pillars. Imagine this in your home and how wonderful it will look and the pride of ownership it will give you. The items inside the cab...
