Description

Technical Description A rare and tall Georgian glass toddy lifter dating to c1820. It has very unusual facet and slice cutting to the swelling knops on the stem which continue down to the shoulders. Flute cuts to the base. We have never seen another example in this form. A Toddy Lifter is used to transpose alcohol from a Serving Rummer or Punch Bowl held in the centre of the table into your glass. You place the todgy lifter into the liquid and let the reservoir at the base fill. Place you finger over the small hole at the top and move to the glass and release, emptying the contents into the glass. This Toddy Lifter comes from the Michael Wallis Toddy Lifter collection put together over a 45 year period. To our knowledge, it is the largest and more comprehensive collection that exists with almost 80 different examples in size, cutting, knops and other decoration. Date & Origin England, c1820. Condition Excellent, no dings, cracks, or restoration, clean and clear. Dimensions Height: 18.5cm.
