Description

Harold Hitchcock 1914-2009 A beautiful and mesmerising oil painting by one of the 20th century's most admired English artists . Measuring 27.5 x 35.5 inches framed , Signed and dated with the artists monogram . Oil painting on artists board. Original sold through the renowned Christopher Wood gallery in London . Harold Hitchcock," the poet Emmanuel Williams writes, "paints pictures of scenes that seem to exist halfway between this world and another. Like Hieronymous Bosch, one might say, or Salvador Dali. The difference is that Hitchcock's scenes are not based on a vision of horror, nor of a dislocated world, but of light, of radiance, of a dimension that is simultaneously recognizable to us, yet paradisaical. We are drawn into complex, improbable, light filled arrangements of mini-vistas... His work ushers the viewer into a deep stillness, a radiance and harmony. Hitchcock takes us into the primaeval garden, into a state - rather than a location - that feels like Eden. There is no greater gift than this." Paul Gallico (1897-1976), the fantastic fiction writer, said Hitchcock's paintings "are windows opening out onto the world of wonderful dreams, magical forests...
