Description

A Good Quality Late 18th Century, English, Georgian Mahogany Stool Of Rectangular Form, Having Upholstered Seat Raised On Elegant Square Tapered Legs And Stretchers. This simple georgian mahogany stool is a great example of utilitarian, 18th century, english furniture. It is well made using good quality mahogany timbers and is just as fit for purpose as the day it was made. The fabric covering of the seat is relatively recently replaced, although there are a few small, light, minor marks to the fabric which may well be able to be cleaned out using the right product and technique. However the overall upholstery is very much sound and should one wish to just replace the fabric covering then this should be very easily and inexpensively done. It is great for a variety of spaces around the home, including as a dressing table stool, a clothes horse in the corner of the bedroom, an additional emergency seat in the living room, or even perhaps as a form of coffee table with a tray placed on top of it. As with all items which we offer for sale it has been inspected by our highly skilled, trained traditional antique furniture restorers before being offered for sale to ensure th...
