Description

This beautiful late 19th-century watercolour by British artist Lily Bristow (1864-1935) depicts a picturesque autumnal view. The crunch of Autumn peppers a winding track as windswept trees lean, partially bereft. Golden tones and tinted foliage enlivened with a brilliant sky. The light, bright enough to squint, radiating into a distant haze. Bristow was a remarkable woman. Determined, fearless and pioneering. Not only did she forge a noteworthy artistic career, exhibiting at the Royal Academy, but also became a record-breaking mountaineer. This is a fine example of her work. The use of colour, rhythm and expression perfectly capturing her unique and boundless personality. Signed/dated lower left, framed and glazed. Medium: Watercolour on paper Overall size: 19" x 25" / 38cm x 63cm Year of creation: 1899 Provenance: Private collection, England. Condition: Artwork presents well. Frame with some light wear. Lily Bristow Lily Bristow Emily Caroline (Lily) Bristow was a remarkable British painter of landscapes and genre scenes in oils and watercolours. She trained at Clapham School of Art and Herkomer's Art School in London. Exhibiting at the Royal Academy, Royal Society...
