Description

Antique oak turned leg dresser base. This Antique oak turned leg dresser base was made in the George III period. It is of good proportions, good length, a nice narrow depth, and with superb patina and colour. Fitted 3 drawers above the very attractive shaped apron, that is between the finely turned front legs. The pot board, consisting of 3 boards. Antique dresser bases give tremendous charm to a home and add an extra piece of character that lifts an area of your home. These fit into so many places and as this is narrow it would be perfect in a hallway or behind a sofa. Imagine this dresser base in your home, and the pleasure it will give you as you show it to your family and friends. We purchased this lovely dresser from a delightful country home in Dorset, that was on the edge of the Blackmore Vale.
