Description

Herbert Thomas Dicksee was a British painter born in 1862. He was best known for his sensitive depictions of animals including dogs, lions and tigers. Dicksee's family was well-ingrained into the art world; his father was an artist and his nephew, Sir Frank Dicksee, was the president of the Royal Academy in London from 1924–1928. Herbert went on to study at the Slade School of Art in London on a scholarship, and his first painting was exhibited in 1881. Many of Dicksee's most famous works were transcribed into prints and etchings published by Clackner of London. He died on February 20, 1942 in Hampstead, England. "A British Bull Dog" is an original etching by Dicksee. This is the 1st state artist's proof on vellum signed in pencil by the artist. It is a circular image 17" in diameter and is one of an edition limited to 250. It is in an old oak frame giving an overall size of 25"x 21".
