Description

Edwardian mahogany extending dining table This Edwardian mahogany extending dining table was made circa 1910. The extending table takes 2 extra leaves so that it will extend to seat 10 or even more depending on chair size and your guests. This table can be used without leaves or using 1 or 2 of the extra leaves, all depending on the seating requirements you have on the day. When closed it is an attractive ovoid shape, with the round ends. Standing on the elegant and impressive claw and ball legs, with the finely carved shell to its knees. Using the winding handle, the table winds out using a patent telescopic action, it is very easy and smoothly runs out so that you can place each leaf into place. Imagine the pride you will have as the owner of this high-quality dining table, also the enjoyment you will have as you entertain your family and friends as you all dine around it.
