Description

A 19th century small Scottish creepie stool. Creepie is a word for an old milking stool. The word creep means to bend down low. These stools were low to the ground and traditionally were made with solid sides with a board that runs along the top forming the seat. This little stool has a cut out heart. It is only small and was probably made for use as a stand or for a teddy or possibly a salespersons piece. It only measures 15.5cm w x 8.5cm d x 9cm h.
