Description

A very stylish late nineteenth century desk clock with integrated compass, reminiscent of the Industrial series of clocks by Andre Guilmet. The eight day movement governed by a cylinder escapement, behind a two tone roman dial with matted central section. The blued steel hands are of the form commonly used by Guilmet. The bronzed case is mounted on a plinth with polished brass mounts formin the feet and carrying handle. Above the dial is a Compass set into the case. This clock dates from the last quarter of the nineteenth century and bares many of the hallmarks of Andre Guilmet's industrial series.
