Description

Bold and well executed. Thoughts that this chair may be Anglo-Indian are based on stylistic grounds. Mahogany was imported into India in the 18th and 19th century often sold by public auction, typically by the log, to enable it to be used for furniture commissions. Further Reading: Amin Jaffer 'Furniture from British India and Ceylon', Timeless Books 2001. Condition: Structurally sound, joints nice and tight no breaks or repairs. Some sun fading particularly to the back, typical minor dents and scratches. Reliable transport can be easily arranged at cost price throughout the UK.
