Description

This very handsome early 20th century leather upholstered high backed desk/study armchair has a superb look to the well used and richly patinated original deep buttoned leather finished with brass studs which are still in a very good usable condition. The chair is of large generous proportions and is very comfortable. It stands on four shaped and moulded legs with early steel castors which form the pedestal. Connecting the chair and pedestal is the sturdy and well engineered spring and ball bearing steel action which offers the user a smooth rotating and rear tilting motion when using the chair. A rare and very pleasing chair, ideal for use with a desk in an office or study or just for that special place to sit and enjoy. English, circa 1930 Height 113cm x width 79cm x depth 90cm Seat height approximately 50cm
