Description

A rare example of a Queen Anne close stool in Walnut and of a very good colour. With a planked lid over a front with four faux drawers complete with their original engraved handles. Simulating a small chest of drawers, this lidded box, originally used as a close stool, would work well as a small occasional table with the added attraction of storage. Also known as a "necessary stool" or "night stool", close stools were used to contain a pewter or earthenware chamberpot. Good condition retaining all original brassware, later hinges and the back two feet are old repairs.
