Description

A superb and very handsome pair of the unusual and sought-after "Lynx" binoculars by Lawrence and Mayo, dating to c.1900. These English pocket sized Field glasses or binoculars are made from brass having been meticulously professionally re-polished to gleam. They come with the integral compass, signed by the maker's Lawrence & Mayo (of London) and "The Lynx". The compass on this example is lucky enough to have an English Design Registration Number which allows us to date the design of this piece to 1897. Each lens has a sunshade that pulls out in bright and sunny conditions. A beautiful pair in superb condition and measuring 4 3/8" wide x 1 3/4" deep; expanding from 3" to 4 1/4" when fully opened and sun shields in operation.
