Description

Louis XVI Style Kingwood Bureau-Plat with Rococo Brass Mounts Louis XVI era beautiful kingwood small bureau-plat or writing table. Crafted in the Louis XVI style, this piece showcases the hallmark features of the period, including satinwood inlay, rococo-style brass mounts, and a gilt-tooled leather writing surface. With three frieze drawers and slender cabriole legs, this writing table seamlessly blends functionality with the sophistication of French design. This writing table is a homage to the Louis XVI style, characterized by clean lines, classical motifs, and a commitment to refined craftsmanship. The design reflects the elegance and sophistication synonymous with the 18th-century French court. Crafted from kingwood, the table's natural beauty is enhanced by satinwood inlay, adding a touch of lightness and contrast to the rich wood grain. The meticulous inlay work showcases the artistry of the period. Rococo-style brass mounts adorn the table, providing a whimsical and ornate touch. These mounts, inspired by the asymmetrical and intricate designs of the Rococo period, contribute to the overall opulence of the piece. The writing surface is adorned with gilt-toole...
