Description

George V mahogany 3 pedestal dining table Georgian style 12 seat mahogany dining table was made in the reign of King George V. This dining table of wonderful design and colour stands on 3 pedestals, the pedestals at each end are tripod bases and the central pedestal is a quadruple base. All the pedestals have splay moulded legs that sweep off the fine turned gun barrel columns, that end with cast brass claw toes with the rolling wheels under. The mahogany top with desirable rounded ends and a fine cross-banding running all around the edge of this most elegant dining table. The George V mahogany 3 pedestal dining table has 2 extension leaves and so gives you many seating options, as you can use the table without the leaves or place just one or both into place. This style of table is classic elegance and has been popular since the late 18th century when they were first designed to be used in the finest houses to entertain around. The George V mahogany 3 pedestal dining table is a good width that will suit a dining area that is restricted to width. When this was made the wealthy were moving into smaller homes and so the need for tables of narrow proportions were required. C...
