Description

A beautiful set of chairs in solid oak, heavy and very solid and robust without weakness in the joints or repairs. These date from c. 1900 but were made in the style of a set of chairs of 1720 with long cabriole legs, shapely curved back splats and lovely hand carved scrolls to the serpentine shaped top rails. . These chairs could easily pass as a set of George I chairs. . Each has a drop in seat which is covered in a thick jade green upholstery fabric in good condition without tears or significant marks or wear. The pads could very easily and inexpensively be re-upholstered in a fabric of your choice but the existing upholstery is of a good quality and has many years of use and life still left in it. . There are small losses, dings, marks and scuffs consistent with age and careful use. The oak frames have a lovely rich and consistent colour throughout and are of a very high quality. The chairs are extremely comfortable - the backs have a gentle rake that is supportive. The seats are well padded and the chairs have a good width and depth and are of attractive proportions. . A really excellent set of late Victorian solid and robust oak chairs, beautifully made and ex...
