Description

French 18th Century Oak Painted Buffet à Deux-Corps. Crafted by master artisans of the 18th Century from selected planks of dense, old-growth French oak and comprising of two separate sections this painted buffet à deux-corps features a moulded cornice overhanging two upper doors. The eye is immediately drawn to the graciously scrolled forms that decorate the upper section and are continued through in great detail in the upper doors. These doors open to reveal three inner shelves offering copious storage opportunities, while the lower section reprises the upper cabinet's décor and showcases further storage. There are hints of the original paint throughout and a later wash has been carried out to bring the time worn paints together. The exterior is of a soft light grey and the interior is of a contrasting inky blue. The ensemble is raised on a shaped frieze with four short feet, the front ones being scrolled. There is copious storage room throughout this chic item with its wonderful hinges, pulls and escutcheons which tell of its quality. The rich patina of the painted finish works to perfect the Paris Country look. With its pleasing proportions and grand scale th...
