Description

Follower of Wouwerman Dutch School c1800 A delightful landscape painted on an oak panel, unsigned and dating from around 1800. The artist has deftly set the mood by placing his travellers silhouetted under a great arc of darkening clouds. It is reminiscent of the work of the 17th century Dutch artist Philips Wouwerman. Philips Wouwerman was celebrated for his paintings of hunting parties, battles and travellers on the road. Horses were a key element of his compositions and a white horse, such as the one depicted was his signature trade mark. Born in Haarlem, the son of the painter Paulus Wouwerman, he was probably trained by his father and by Frans Hals. Wouwerman became a member of the Haarlem painters' guild in 1640 and his earliest dated paintings are of 1646. Condition Paint a little thin in places, age associated wear and the oak panel has split and been repaired in the distant past. The frame is probably original and has minor repairs. Size 25cm x 38cm (43cm x 56cm framed) 10 x 15 inches (17 x 22 inches framed)
