Description

Stunning colour in this late 19th or early 20th century West Persian saddlebag. The Kurds were famous for their ability to produce, and juxtapose, the richest natural dyes known to man, and this is what made their utilitarian objects so popular with collectors in the West. This is one of the most colourful bags of this type, with an extraordinary light blue, bright gold and rich coral red, coupled with the highly patinated wool that collectors are on the look out for. With the original back, crafted with a deceptively simple blend of similar colours and one contrasting, it is a superb piece of art. Would make a fabulous pillow. In excellent condition, full pile, the only repairs being circular, 'granny' style overcasting to protect the remains of the closure tabs 2'0" x 2'0"
