Description

Elegant early C19th Regency period octagonal brass-mounted rosewood tripod base table with chequer-board games top. Smart Regency rosewood games table of octagonal design, standing on inverted shaped tripod supports. The faceted column with brass fluted panels onto a circular central boss, the 'hips' of the legs with brass-mounted caps. The base and legs with ebony stringing detail. The octagonal rosewood top with a broad cross-banded edge with ebony stringing, the centre inlaid with a precisely-defined chequer or chess-board games top. The squares of the top unusually being of alternating inlay of rosewood and oak. The form and design of this echoing the style of Louis Le Gaigneur of London, the French emigré cabinet-maker associated with this type of brass-mounted furniture during this period. The undoubtedly French design influence, combined with the use of English oak in the top, pointing to the association. In excellent original condition, with a pleasing mellow colour and patina.
