Description

Victorian mahogany extending dining table This Victorian mahogany extending dining table was made circa 1870. The cabinetmaker selected mahogany that was of beautiful colour and a most interesting grain. The table extends easily by using the winding handle that extends the table on its Patent winding mechanism. You may use this dining table without leaves or with one of both set in place, according to your dining requirements. The colour of this Victorian mahogany extending dining table is stunning. The table stands on the desirable turned and fluted legs with the original brass cup castors below. Victorian mahogany extending dining tables of this type make a fantastic table that not only gives fantastic flexibility to your seating needs but also gives a pleasure to you as you entertain your family and friends. 236cms long extended with both leaves in place 93ins 148cms closed with no leaves 58ins 118cms wide 46 1/2ins 75cms high 29 1/2ins Each extra leaf 44.5cms 17 1/2ins All Measurements are as accurate as possible.
