Description

A rare and usual piece of Mid 19th Century glassware. This small example is believed to be an apothecary glass, for use by a chemist or pharmacist. The trumpet shaped bowl rises from a plain stem, with the rim featuring a small pouring lip to one side. The foot is lightly domed and there is a clean broken pontil mark to the underside. The glass is of good colour and carries striations and internal bubbles from the glass blowing process. A rare and collectable piece. Dimensions below. Postage and packing :- £10.00 UK. £20.00 Europe. £26.00 Outside Europe. Condition :- Excellent, with no cracks or chips. Origin :- English. Date :- c1850. Foot diameter :- 5.7 cms. Height :- 11.2 cms. Rim diameter :- 5.8 cms.
