Description

French Art Deco opalescent 'chrysanthemum' pattern, glass bowl by Andre Hunebelle (1896-1985) The 'chrysanthemum' bowl featured in the Hunebelle catalogue, and this example simply marked 'MADE IN FRANCE'. Initially Andre studied mathematics before he became a decorator, designer, and then a master glass maker in the mid-1920s. His work is known for its clean lines, which are elegant and singularly strong. He exhibited his own glass in a luxurious store in Champs Élysées, Paris until 1938. Etienne Franckhauser, made Andre's moulds and those for Lalique and Sabino, which was fabricated by the crystal factory in Choisy-le-Roi, France. Hunebelle pieces are marked in several ways. The most common is A.HUNEBELLE-FRANCE in molded capitals either within the glass design or on the base. Other pieces are marked simply A.HUNEBELLE. There was also a paper label with A and H superimposed in a stylized manner. Since paper labels are frequently lost, many pieces may appear completely unmarked. Although, his work is similar to Lalique glass (he was a friend of Laliques son). His love of mathematics and the fashion for the clean lines of Art Deco, are seen in his designs, which are often...
