Description

We are delighted to offer this splendid antique Victorian citrine pendant necklace set in 9ct gold made in the Victorian era c.1850. The gold mount is made exceptionally well with a fabulous floral chasing and hand-engraved border which embellishes this pendant from edge to edge. Despite the small surface area to work on, the level of detail is very impressive and intricate and done to the finest standards of the late Georgian/early Victorian period - a true testament to the craftsmanship and skill of the artisans, unparalleled by contemporary pieces. The central oval faceted citrine is of an enchanting honey-like golden hue which changes colour depending on the lighting and angle. The overall gold tone matches the border and exuberates an opulent aura upon wearing. A wonderful piece of fine Victorian jewellery whether it be a special gift or for a personal collection, this pendant would make for a perfect addition for the antique jewellery lover. Citrine is known to be the birthstone for November. The pendant is unmarked as is common with articles of this period and as such we have tested it fully with results indicating 9ct solid gold.
