Description

This is a very fine Georgian mahogany chest of drawers with all of its original features including a brushing slide (originally used by the butler to brush the gentleman's trousers, hence the name). The top is beautifully cross banded, showing off the delicate patina. And the same technique is evident in the graduated drawers, which are cockbeaded with oak linings and original swan-necked handles. The chest is framed by recessed quarter round fluted columns to either side and finishes on four ogee feet.
