Description

A good quality Victorian specimen cabinet with 8 drawers and a glazed door. The cabinet itself is made from pine with its original stained finish. It stands on a plinth base and each drawer has turned wooden knobs. It is a good quality piece and it comes with its original working key. The cabinet would have originally been used for a collection of butterflies and insects and each drawer has a cork lining on the base to enable pins to be gently pushed through. We have cleaned up the drawers and put a loose thick paper lining over the cork. It is in good original condition and is certainly a very usable item. There are signs of age and use and it has picked up a few knocks, scuffs and marks over the years, particularly on the top surface, but nothing untoward and it has a good aged patina. The drawers all open and close smoothly and the cabinet displays very nicely. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
