Description

A handsome William IV period rosewood stool with a richly worked needlepoint top and bobbin-turned stretcher base. The rectangular seat is upholstered in a charming floral tapestry, bordered in crimson velvet, and framed within a neatly moulded rosewood surround. The base is raised on four cabriole legs with bold scroll-carved feet and roundel details, united by an elegant bobbin-turned X-stretcher with central turned finial. A generously sized and versatile piece, its scale and stance set it apart from more conventional footstools, lending it a more multipurpose character, ideal as a decorative low stool or occasional seat in a reception space or bay window. Presented in very good antique condition with a warm aged patina and minor wear to the upholstery consistent with age. Structurally sound, clean and ready to place in the home. English, circa 1830s.
