Description

This late 19th-century oil painting by German artist Heinrich Max Krause (1861-1931) depicts the historic Bamburgh Castle in Northumberland gently lit by a setting sun. The imposing sight of this towering fortress would've captured the Victorian imagination. Heinrich Max Krause was predominantly known for his atmospheric landscapes and coastal scenes, which often depict views from the North of England and Scotland. He was taught by his father, the landscape painter, Franz Emil Krause, who probably studied at the Berlin Academy. He worked under various pseudonyms including Max Sinclair and it appears that the landscapes he produced in this name were for the art dealer, George Wilson. His relationship with Wilson began in around 1880. His works are held in several public collections including the National Library of Wales. Signed 'M Sinclair' in the lower left and held within a gilt frame. Learn more about Heinrich Max Krause in our directory. Medium: Oil on canvas Overall size: 38½" x 29" / 98cm x 73cm Year of creation: c. 1890 Labels & Inscriptions: Inscribed on reverse.
