Description

1645 Joan Blaeu published a county Atlas of England and Wales as part of his Atlas Novus. The original map was in book form and therefore it is 2 pages joined in the centre (as are all original county maps) Unlike Speed and Morden it is believed that Blaeu's maps were hand coloured in the print shop and therefore all maps of Warwickshire and Worcestershire will be the same. On the back is the history and interesting facts about Warwick and the surrounding town. I have had it framed in a simple gilt frame and non-reflective museum glass put in the front. The back is also glazed so everything can be seen.
