Description

Rowland Fade, 1939-2017 is best known for his abstract forms and innovative approach to art. This painting was created in 1960s, is a mixed media piece on board with a striking and bold Brutalist composition. The Brutalist style emerged in the mid-20th century and is characterized by its raw, rough, and unrefined nature. In this painting, the Brutalist style is translated into a mixed media composition. The use of strong, angular forms, textured surfaces, and a sense of rawness creates a visually striking and powerful composition. Rowland Fade's exploration of the Brutalist style in this artwork showcases his forward-thinking approach to art. It invites viewers to appreciate the unconventional use of raw materials and angular forms and bold colours giving the viewer a deeper understanding of the Brutalist style. 63cm high x 108cm width x 3cm depth UK Delivery: £40
