Description

With a fantastic colour this mid 19th century Padauk wood sideboard is in excellent original condition. With two long over four short and deep drawers, each retaining finely cast original brass handles, escutcheons and locks. . Finished to back and sides with inset fielded panels, it can be placed centrally in a room and act as a table or at the side of a room as a sideboard. The drawer fronts have been carved in the solid to create a raised plateau with stepped back border. . The desk carcase in solid Padauk Wood and of the highest quality. The cabinet work is exemplary with fine hand cut dovetails neat rectangular exposed tenons which have both a practical and decorative function, typical of Canton work that was made for export to Western Europe. . Padauk is a rare and very beautiful wood. It is heavier, more dense and has greater endurance than oak. When cut it has purple hues and a swirling grain with contrasting light and dark heartwood similar to rosewood. The drawer linings on this desk show this beautiful colour and grain particularly well. . All of the drawers open and close smoothly and are long, tall and deep, providing a considerable amount of storage ...
