Description

An early 18th century oak side table c1700 with beautiful reel turned legs and stretchers with block supports, an unusual central front to back stretcher, and a full width freize drawer. The table has good colour and patina, with the top a slightly paler colour where it has presumably been exposed to more daylight and use. The turning on the base of this table is just lovely and gives it real character. It is in good condition and has obviously been well loved and used over the last 320 years or so. The drawer handles are not original but are certainly not a recent alteration. It appears that there was once a secret lock fitted in the rail below the drawer as there is a hole cut through, and a space in the bottom edge of the drawer where the latch would have located. Condition: Overall this is in good condition with some age related wear, as you would expect. There is some damage to the rail below the drawer where the hidden lock was once located. The top appears to have had some repairs at some point as there are screws through the glueblocks underneath. The top has various marks. There is some wear/loss to the back edge of the top. There are a few areas of damage/lo...
