Description

A superb pair of Irish mahogany Chippendale style armchairs attributed to James Hicks of Dublin. The pierced acanthus carved back splats with "shell" carved corners. Supported on carved cabriole legs with acanthus carved knees & Irish paw feet with cross stretchers Circa 1895. JAMES HICKS (1886 - 1936, a cabinet maker, was extremely skilled at producing furniture in 18th Century styles. He trained in the cabinet making workshops on Tottenham Court Road in London. On his return he set up business in 1893 at 5 Lower Pembroke Street, Dublin. He established what was to become one of Dublin's leading cabinet firms with a client list that included Princess Victoria, the Crown Princess of Sweden, and King Edward VII making fine veneered & inlaid furniture mostly by commission.
