Description

A beautiful late Victorian Cavalry campaign chest of drawers made by the Army & Navy CSL. A truly wonderful example made from teak. It's made for cavalry transportation divided into two sections which are neatly stacked on top of another. This chest being unique due to its pull-out secretaire drawer at a lower height allowing you to sit and work comfortably. A very practical piece even to this day. The sloping writing section is made from satinwood with the gilt tooled leather in the centre and is supported on a sloped hinge. Beside that are two storage compartments revealed by a sliding lid with the right side comprising of removable pen storage and space for three ink wells. Underneath this section is a well operated and hidden secret drawer released by a small push section in the middle section which works like it was made yesterday. Once pushed reveals a velvet lined drawer. The top right drawer has the 'Army & Navy C.S.L. Makers' circular ivory label. The reference number of the piece is stamped on the inside beneath a drawer. In 1871, both by and on behalf of British Army and Navy officers, the main purpose of the 'Army & Navy Co-operative Society...
