Description

Oak refectory draw leaf dining table This Oak refectory draw leaf dining table was made circa 1920 in a high-quality workshop, probably Titchmarsh and Goodwin the famous specialists in oak. The table is rectangular and has a draw leaf that pulls out each end to extend the table to suit your dining requirements. The underframe with the carved frieze has a turned leg to each corner, these are joined by a double Y stretcher. You can use this table with one or both leaves out or with no leaves. Refectory dining tables have been strong and durable dining tables that have been popular for hundreds of years. Imagine entertaining with your family and friends around this wonderful oak refectory draw leaf dining table. 228cms when open 90ins 99cms deep 39ins 76cms high 30ins 153cms closed 60ins All measurements are approximate.
