Description

REDUCED TO CLEAR A very large and extremely substantial solid oak early 18th century mule chest later converted to a cupboard with two cupboard doors and three lower drawers. The cupboard extends behind the central three false drawers giving additional storage. The mule chest boasts inlay to the front, panelled sides and a moulded two plank oak top. Later handles. One false drawer drop handle is absent (to the lower left). There are some signs of wear commensurate with age but generally the piece displays well with great colour throughout. An extremely functional piece of attractive form, perfect for use as a storage cupboard, drinks cabinet, dresser or counter.
