Description

A 19th century Continental painted porcelain dish in repoussé brass frame. The plaque showcases a beautifully hand-painted side-view portrait of a young woman from the Renaissance era, dressed in intricate period attire. It is based on an original oil painting by German artist Wilhelm Menzler (1846 - 1926), titled "Young Woman in Renaissance Costume" from 1879. The portrayal is distinguished by its splendid coloration and meticulous attention to detail. Several German porcelain manufacturers, such as Dresden, KPM, and Berlin makers, reproduced this same portrait plaque. While the plaque lacks a visible maker's mark, it bears an indentation of "160" and some old labels on the reverse side. 512 g 5 cm tall 33 cm top diameter 10 cm base diameter 15 cm portrait diameter Very good antique condition. Minor scratching to porcelain portrait; brass frame has wear appropriate to age, is slightly bent.
