Description

• This is one of the most elegant versions of a classic Gillow's design made during the reign of George IV. • In figured rosewood, it has superbly sturdy carved table end supports that does not necessitate, as on many tables the typical need of a low cross stretcher that both looks awkward and restricts leg movement when sitting. • This version has finely cast lion drawer pulls with the benefit of keyed working locks. • And has the extra feature of matching rear dummy draws with draw pulls so can feature as a centre – library table. • It oozes Gillow's quality and is presented in super restored condition with its totally original rosewood veneer. • This is a very practical and useable desk – not too big but deep enough to ergonomically accommodate a large desk top computer and yet be turned into a pretty decorated table if the lap-top is put away! • Delivery £90uk ex.
