Furniture from this era is characterised by elegance, symmetry and classical influences; such timeless pieces were usually made from high-quality wood, such as mahogany, and featured exquisite craftsmanship. Georgian sideboards often feature elegant details such as serpentine fronts, brass gallery rails, and inlays; bowfront designs and pedestal bases are also common. They would have drawers and cupboards for storing tableware and a flat top surface for the placing of dishes for serving food and for the display of decorative items This fine Eng...
