Description

An extraordinary pair of Doulton Wall Mounted Candle Sconces, attributed to the skilled artisan Florrie Jones, (FJ monogram to the underside of each, hidden by the brass mounts), circa 1910. In my extensive experience, spanning over 35 years in this captivating industry, I've yet to encounter a duo quite like this. These sconces, with their impressive size, hint at a grandeur that suggests they might have once graced the walls of a church. The allure, however, lies not just in their scale but in the remarkable quality of their glaze, which adds a touch of brilliance to their already exquisite craftsmanship. Despite the passage of time, they remain in impeccable condition, a testament to their enduring beauty. These Doulton treasures offer more than just historical significance; they bring a touch of sophistication that effortlessly transcends eras. (You have to love AI).
