Description

A beautifully proportioned early 18th-century English Queen Anne chest of drawers in richly figured burr and walnut, circa 1710. The veneered and feather-banded top mirrors the burr-figured drawer fronts, bordered with fine feather banding. The sides are walnut, cross-banded vertically to front and rear; drawer linings are of oak, consistent with period craftsmanship. All brass escutcheons are original. Three handles have been precision-cast to match the surviving originals, maintaining visual and historical integrity. Later bun feet, faithful in form, provide stability without compromising authenticity. The chest exhibits a warm, honeyed patina, the product of centuries of waxing, and represents the restrained elegance of Queen Anne furniture at its best. Comparable examples of similar age and burr-figured quality are currently offered by leading dealers at £8,000–£12,000. This piece, presented in exceptional condition and proportion, represents outstanding value. Free UK mainland delivery. Trade and interior design enquiries welcome. Date circa 1710 Condition Good antique condition historic knocks, marks, cracks, scratches, wear, imperfections, repairs and alter...
