Description

Large Antique portrait of a French Gentleman Wonderful 3/4 length Portrait of old French man seating in a French Carolean carved high back carver throne chair and holding a French antique gold box. The face is very well painted, portraying a characterful confident gentleman looking out and engaging with the viewer. Painted in the late 19th/early 20th century, possibly in Bordeaux in France Provenance 'A la palette d'or / Bonnet', supplier of painting and drawing articles located at 52 Fossés de l'Intendance in BORDEAUX In the 19th century, portraits were an important means of showcasing wealth, status, and power. French dignitaries were especially fond of commissioning portraits, which often depicted them in regal clothing and against grandiose backdrops. One such portrait might depict a French dignitary in a formal setting, such as a government building or a palace. The subject might be seated in an ornate chair, with a table or desk nearby, signifying his importance and power. He might be dressed in fine, tailored clothing, with a jacket or coat that is impeccably cut and made of luxurious materials like silk or velvet. The portrait would likely showcase the digni...
