Description

Fantastic Chromolithograph signed Richard Caton Woodville 1902 titled "All that was left of them" beautifully set in a white boarder and gilded frame. It is a poignant scene depicts soldiers on a battle site some injured but all still fighting. In excellent condition ready to enhance any wall. Richard Caton Woodville was an American artist who spent his professional career in Europe, after studying in Düsseldorf under the direction of Karl Ferdinand Sohn. He died of an overdose of morphine in London at the age of 30. He was the father of Richard Caton Woodville Jr., also a noted artist. In his short career he produced fewer than 20 paintings; but they were well known in their time through exhibition and prints and have remained prominent in the canon of American painters.
